Bathtub range is dimensionless number i.e. BER. BER is probability of bit errors. The bathtub curve of timing errors is integral or CDF (Cumulative Density Function) of jitter PDF. TailFit™ can predict probability of extremely rare bit errors. Bathtub plot for BER as low as 10⁻¹⁶ can be found easily.

Eye Level (EyeLevel) Eye Level is the amplitude level used to represent data bits, measured in Amplitude Units (AU). For an ideal NRZ signal, there are two eye levels: +A and -A. The analyze method calculates eye levels by estimating the mean value of the vertical histogram in a window around the EyeDelay, which is also the 50% point between eye crossing times [3].

This Q-Learning code for MATLAB has been written by Ioannis Makris and Andrew Chalikiopoulos. It trains an agent to find the shortest way through a 25x25 maze. Following convergence of the algorithm, MATLAB will print out the shortest path to the goal and will also create three graphs to measure the performance of the agent.
