You start dousing the rotors with multiple bottles of rotor oil hoping that will take care of the problem. Well, it doesn't because you are addressing a symptom not the problem. The only thing that fixes this problem is to disassemble the instrument, pull all slides and all rotors then completely flush out the instrument and clean off every part.

Do not ever use glue to try to repair such problems as the use of glue just makes it more difficult for the repair technician to make the proper repair to rebuild the key or to resolder the posts back onto the body of the flute or sax. If pads come loose from the keys they can be reglued if the surface of the pads are still intact and the pad can be
