Mike Haines, a local rancher, says his grandfather arrived in Dakota Territory during the gold rush of the 1870s and bought a ranch on Deep Creek in 1890. Faith's first homesteaders tried to farm like Iowans and Minnesotans. They raised hogs, sheep, chickens and cattle, and planted all sorts of grains.

My faith journey began on a North Dakota homestead next to an old Indian trail that led down to the river in our pasture, where the Indians camped many years before we lived there. To get to our little town on the prairie, you headed east past the Christmas tree corner, turned north and drove into town 6 miles away.
