It is common to report statistically significant p-values with an asterisk. Let's say, for example, you want to report p-values at the .05 level — any number below this threshold should be followed by an asterisk. You can use conditional formatting in Excel to automate this process. Want to really automate the process?

~~Excel Conditional Formatting for Statistical Significance~~

The level of statistical significance is often expressed as a p-value between 0 and 1. The smaller the p-value, the stronger the evidence that you should reject the null hypothesis. A p-value less than 0.05 (typically  $< 0.05$ ) is statistically significant. It indicates strong evidence against the null hypothesis, as there is less than a 5% probability the null is correct (and the results are random).

They can be treated as if they had an infinite number of significant figures. For example, when using the speed conversion, you need to multiply the value in m/s by 3.6 if you want to obtain the value in km/h. The number of significant figures is still determined by the accuracy of the initial speed value in m/s - for example,  $15.23 * 3.6 = 54.83$ .
