Mixing and mastering are two different components but similarly, important parts in the sound creation, that can frequently end up plainly obscured and difficult to differentiate between. Fundamentally, mixing is the progress before mastering, that includes changing and adjusting singular tracks together, to frame a professional stereo.wav file.

Mixing is the start of post-production for an audio producer and their song. An audio producer will balance out the individual tracks to make a cohesive song. An audio producer will use EQ, compression, panning and reverb to reduce the incompatibility between tracks. Mastering on the other hand is the process of making playback quality optimal.
