Those Who Work Those Who

Directed by Antoine Russbach. With Olivier Gourmet, Adèle Bochatay, Louka Minnella, Isaline Prévost. Frank, a man of action who worked his way up all by himself, dedicates his life to work. No matter the place or the circumstances, be it day or night, he's on the phone, handling the cargo ships he charts for major companies.

First example, "look at those whom are walking down the street". The people walking down the street are the object of the preposition (at whom); the person being spoken to is the subject because they are the ones doing the action (looking). Try this. Eg. Those who are walking down the street have their phones in their hands.

Those Who Work, Those Who Don't: Poverty, Morality, and ...

Compellingly written, shot through with honesty and empathy, Those Who Work, Those Who Don't is a rare firsthand account that studies the rural poor. As incomes erode and the American dream becomes more and more inaccessible, Sherman reveals that moral values and practices become a way for the poor to gain status and maintain a sense of dignity in the face of economic ruin.

For the second, "with" goes to "the people" and the subject is "who" because that is the person that the verb "I work" is directed towards. Actually the error you made was with "is". Since "people" is plural in those sentences you must say "are" as that is the proper conjugation for "they" or the 3rd person plural of which you are referencing.

The Rewards Of Those Who Work For God - Religion - Nigeria

Those Who Work, Those Who Don't is based on the intimate interviews and in-depth research Sherman conducted while spending a year living in "Golden Valley," a remote logging town in Northern California. Economically devastated by the 1990 ruling that listed the northern spotted owl as a threatened species, Golden Valley proved to be a rich case study for Sherman.
